	What is Grindr, and how does the Grindr application allow users to contact other users? Grindr is a geolocation-based social networking application for the LGBTQ+ and broader community. You can chat via Grindr's messaging system; the chats are transmitted within Grindr's platform. You may send messages containing text, images, video, and voice. Upon opening the application, you are presented with a grid, or cascade, of other members who are sorted by distance. Grindr collects your location information within a 100m radius of accuracy. You have the option to "Show Distance," which will display an approximate calculation of the distance between you and other members (i.e. relative distance between one user to another). Even if "Show Distance" is off, your relative distance is used to arrange the cascade based on distance. We do not currently have a way for you to proactively SMS verify before we ask you to do so. To verify your account, simply follow the SMS verification prompts on your screen. SMS verification is an important anti-spam measure, and we use user phone numbers for this verification purpose only. There is no need to enter your country code as it should already be filled out. If you live in a region that has a specific area code, make sure that you enter it before typing in your phone number. It's just one more way we've created to make interactions more fun and engaging. To interact using Chat Reactions, here's what you do: • Double-tap on the message you "like" and a flame icon (🔥) will appear on the upper-right corner of the message. • You can also like your own messages. • If you & the person you're chatting with like the same message, two flame icons (🔥🔥) will appear on the message. Please keep in mind that if the person you are chatting with has their Grindr notifications enabled, they will be notified when you have liked a message and vice versa. You cannot turn off chat reaction notifications specifically, however, you will not get notified if you turn ALL Grindr notifications off.
